ALEXANDER DUMAS is a burly fellow. His large, d. round cheeks stand out till they seem to stretch he very skin that covers them, and it looks as nooth as a polished apple. His black crisped ir is piled high above his forehead, and stands iled into two unequal masses-one inclining to right and the other to the left. His eyes are man whose physical enjoyment is boundless, tinuance of the same. negro blood is evident to one who knows he it, but it would not be detected by one who riously knew it not. It appears in the peculiar and the man and all his parts. It crisped heaped his hair; and made him dress up in ring red to have his portrait taken. But his nas Hamblin, the actor.
